Conference center land-buy approved

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council moved ahead with action on the downtown conference center Monday night by authorizing the city manager to buy the land needed for the project.

In a special formal meeting, the council voted 4 - 1 to authorize the city manager to pay $15,000 for a parcel of land owned by Paul F. McRoy. Under the arrangement, McRoy is guaranteed payment for his property at 209 W. Walnut St. whether the city exercises its option or not.

In another 4 - 1 vote, the council approved an ordinance taking effect "immediately" delegating the city manager to acquire property for the conference center and authorizing the use of eminent domain proceedings to complete the project.

The ordinance directs the city manager "to negotiate for and on behalf of the city" and "to take any and all steps necessary" to acquire the property needed for the completion of the Carbondale hotel/convention center and parking garage project.

The city manager is authorized by the ordinance to pay the property owners any amount of money within the approved city budget, provided the amount is not less than the appraised value received by the city.

In the event the city manager and property owners cannot agree on a price for the property, the property will be acquired by the city through condemnation proceedings "as authorized by the laws and constitution of the state of Illinois," the ordinance states. The city manager and city attorney are authorized by the ordinance to start court proceedings to acquire conference center property for the city.

The new ordinance is "basically the same" as an earlier ordinance that authorized the acquisition of land for the project and was struck down by the Illinois Supreme Court, according to background information given to the council by the city's legal department. The difference is that the new ordinance specifies that any court proceedings would be in accordance with state law.

The city needs to acquire 17 parcels of land for the project in the downtown redevelopment district, the area designated as the conference center site. The owners of 16 parcels of land had given written offers of sale with various conditions prior to Monday night's meeting. McRoy was the only property owner who hadn't formally offered his parcel for sale to the city.

Finishing touches

Reagan says anti-nuke groups weaken the U.S.

SEATTLE (AP) - President Reagan on Tuesday likened the anti-nuclear movement, with "all its modern hype and theatrics," to Neville Chamberlain's appeasement of Adolf Hitler before World War II. "They would wage peace," he declared, "by weakening the free. That just doesn't make sense."

In a speech to the American Legion, Reagan said "the members of the real peace movement, the real peacemakers, are people like you. You understand that peace must be built on strength."

The president said also that "there's a democratic revolution going on in this world. It may not grab the headlines, but it's there and it's growing. The tide of history is with the forces of freedom — and so are we."

As examples of that "democratic revolution," Reagan noted he recently met with "resident Abdou Diouf of Senegal, 'a great man doing a great job.' And he said 'a similar democratic success story has just taken place in Nigeria," where presidential elections were completed last week.

Reagan, wearing a Legionnaire's cap, was applauded 16 times by the audience of 7,000. But outside the Seattle Center, a crowd chanted "No More Reagan!" and waved effigies and signs. One read: "You can't eat bombs." After a two-hour stay, Reagan headed back to California to resume an extended vacation.

Reagan denounced the "naked, external aggression" in Chad, where Libya's Col. Moammar Khadafi is backing rebel forces against the government.

"Drawing upon the nearly $10 billion worth of Soviet military equipment and munitions now in Libya, Col. Khadafi has been using Soviet-built fighter bombers, T-55 tanks and artillery in a blatant attempt to destroy a legitimate government," Reagan charged.

Beer booths, Port-A-Potties recommended for Halloween

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

Six beer booths should be placed along Grand Avenue on Halloween weekend to attract revelers away from Illinois Avenue and alleviate congestion there, the Halloween Core Committee recommended to the Carbondale City Council Monday.

Police Chief Ed Hogan, speaking for the committee, proposed authorization of eight beer booths — two on South Illinois Avenue and six on Grand Avenue — as well as unlimited food and sundries booths and 30 portable toilets for the two days known as "City Fair Days," Friday, Oct. 28 and Saturday, Oct. 29.

"My prime interest is to alleviate stress on Illinois," Hogan said. The beer booths on Grand Avenue and a band at the Recreation Center on Saturday will help do that, he said. Additionally, the beer booths "will provide more control over who is drinking and where that drinking is done," he said.

Hogan called the recommendation a "formalized version" of what the committee submitted earlier for fair days and said that the recommendations "are not etched in stone."

The committee suggested that four of the booths be assigned to the four licensed Carbondale fraternal organizations: the Elks, Eagles, Moose and American Legion, if they apply. The remaining booths would be awarded by lottery to those Carbondale licensees seeking space, the recommendation says.

City Manager Carroll Fry voiced opposition to that part of the recommendation.

"I think you ought to draw them all by lottery," he said. "If you don't, you'll get cries of foul, low-blow and favoritism."

The beer booths will be charged a minimum fee of $250 — $10 for a minimum of 25 feet. The food sundries booths will be charged a minimum fee of $100 — $10 for a minimum of 10 feet. Additional space would be charged $10 per 5-foot increment, according to the recommendation. The fees would be used to alleviate the city's post-Halloween clean-up costs.

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn said that the city could benefit by not imposing a limit on the number of licenses sold for beer booths.

"I don't feel we should limit the number we sell," he said. "We could use any of that revenue that could come in."

Tuxhorn also said that limiting the number of beer booths would not limit the amount of drinking that is done. "If we have one beer booth, we'll just have one long line," he said.

The 30 portable toilets will cost about $1,500, but the committee doesn't know where that money will come from, Hogan said.

"The Police department budget cannot afford $1,500," Hogan said.

"Neither can the council's," Westberg replied.

Fry recommended that each beer booth be responsible for funding two portable toilets.

"They have a responsibility, why not tie that cost there?" he said.

Some opposition was raised to the recommendation that the beer booth licenses be available only to present license-holders. Steve Katsinas, member of the boards of directors of the Mid-America Peace Project and Southern Counties Action

Pell Grants increase $500

By Anne Plazza
Staff Writer

Students receiving Pell Grants during the 1984-85 school year may get an added $500 in funding as a new student aid law increases the amount of allowable costs to $1,600 from $1,100.

According to Joe Camille, director of Student Work and Financial Assistance, over 5,000 SIU-C students will be affected.

"All students living off campus and receiving Pell Grants will see an increase in aid," Camille said.

Last year, 5,441 SIU-C students received Pell Grants, according to Janet Jeffries, public relations coordinator for the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance. She said figures for the present year were not yet available.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Paul Simon, is the first increase in the grant since its inception in 1972, according to David Carle, Simon's legislative assistant.

Carle said another part of the package of higher education amendments provides Truth-in-Lending safeguards for student borrowers in the Guaranteed Student Loan and National Direct Student Loan programs. He said this will give students the same information other borrowers receive when they take out loans.

In addition, the law extends present eligibility requirements for the Pell Grant and Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

Carle said this is the third consecutive year Congress, rather than the Department of Education, has set eligibility requirements for the two student aid programs.

In a separate action, Education Secretary Terrence Bell has extended the draft compliance deadline for receiving financial aid to Sept. 30, Carle said.

"This may provide some relief to college administrators and students in this chaotic situation," he said.

Meanwhile, a lawsuit remains pending in the U.S. Supreme Court challenging the link between draft compliance and financial aid eligibility.

Carcinogen level high but safe in Carbondale's water supply

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

The level of the carcinogen trihalomethane in Carbondale's water has surpassed the limit set by the Environmental Protection Agency, but it is not at the point of being a hazard.

That was the report of Jim Swayze, Carbondale water superintendent, to the Carbondale City Council Monday night.

"We do not consider it a hazard. We are treating it as something we have to notify the public about," he said.

Trihalomethane "is a known carcinogen, although it is debated at what level," he said. The EPA requires that the public be notified when the substance exceeds a 100 parts per billion limit, Swayze said.

"We have received a notice that we are at 159 ppb—that is 59 over," Swayze said.

That means one-tenth of a pound of trihalomethane can be found in a million pounds of water, the water superintendent said.

"It is not a noticeable difference," Swayze said.

Carbon filters at the water plant absorb some of the substance and those filters will be changed, Swayze said. Another water sample will be taken near the end of September and Swayze said he expects that level will be lower.

Trihalomethane is an organic compound of decayed vegetation and animals formed during the pre-chlorination process, and has "probably been in the water since 1926 when chlorination began in Carbondale," Swayze said.

"It has been common throughout the history of the plant. It's always been there. Now we have the instrumentation to learn that it is there," he said. "It's not a matter of it occurring overnight."

The EPA began to test for trihalomethane last year and four samples are required each year, Swayze said. Those four samples are averaged and Carbondale's most recent average went over the 100 ppb limit, Swayze said.

"One hundred ppb is a very low limit," Swayze said. "The EPA builds in a tremendous safety factor."

Experts don't agree whether trihalomethane is a problem, Swayze said. In some laboratory studies, animals have developed cancer from the substance and in other studies, the animals did not, he said. However, the EPA calls the substance a contaminant and has set a limit on the amount that can be present in drinking water, Swayze said.

"We do not consider it a threat or hazard," Swayze said. "I'm certainly not going to stop drinking it myself."

Death of Philippine exile probed

QUEZON CITY, Philippines (AP) — Opposition leader Salvador Laurel voiced suspicions of military involvement in the assassination of Benigno Aquino and called Tuesday for the establishment of an independent commission of jurists to investigate the killing Sunday of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' chief opponent as he arrived at Manila's international airport after three years of self-exile in the United States.

Laurel, who heads a moderate anti-Marcos coalition, said the failure of the government to conduct a fair investigation would cause disillusionment in the non-violent opposition and encourage many of them to join the armed rebels.

Prostitution ring hooked by police

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police say they have broken up a prostitution ring of 150 housewives, nurses, secretaries and other women who worked for legal escort services run by a former streetwalker who became a millionaire.

The women charged $160 an hour for prostitution and carried credit card machines so their customers wouldn't have to pay cash, authorities said. The operation rang up millions of dollars in three years of business, which it funneled into as many as 60 bank accounts.

Inflation slows, food prices decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food costs declined again in July, but nearly everything else went up enough to raise overall consumer prices 0.4 percent, the government said Friday. At that, the report put inflation for the past 12 months at only 2.4 percent — the best showing in 17 years.

The July increase in the Consumer Price Index was twice the size of the June rise, the Labor Department reported. That bumped 1983's inflation so far to an annual rate of 3.2 percent, still better than 1982's figure of 3.9 — itself the best showing in a decade for a calendar year.

Teachers slate new contract vote

Carbondale High School District 165 teachers will vote Wednesday night on the administration's latest contract proposal made Monday.

In a prepared statement, Carbondale Community High School Education Association President Lee Taylor said negotiations were at an impasse, and if the proposed contract fails to pass, a mediator will be called in.

About 20 coaches and extracurricular activity sponsors, one-fourth of the CCHSEA membership, have signed a letter saying they will resign their positions at the end of the school year unless they receive more "concerned support" from the administration, Mary Boyle, spokesperson for the union said.

Concerned support means money, Boyle said.

Teachers attended a workshop at Carbondale East High School Monday and reported for work without a contract at opening day classes Tuesday. Regular classes will begin Wednesday.

Boyle said that teachers will report for work Wednesday, but refused to speculate on whether or not the contract will pass.

"We think we made a good offer," said Reid Martin, District 165 superintendent.

Details of the proposal will not be made public unless the contract passes, Martin said.

The 81 members of the CCHSEA will vote on the contract at 8 p.m. at the Learning Center at 200 N. Springer St.

Chicago has first black police chief

CHICAGO (AP) — Fred Rice Jr. on Tuesday became the first black police superintendent in this city's 150-year history, taking over four months after the election of Chicago's first black mayor.

He assumes the reins of the 12,258-member force several weeks after the resolution of a civil rights suit filed against the Chicago department over its treatment of black officers.

Rice, 56, is the first black to head a police force in any of the nation's three largest cities — New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I expect to be anything more than a sergeant," Rice, a Korean War veteran and father of two grown children, said recently in recalling his days as a rookie in the mid-1950s.

He said he was "quite elated" by the decision and pledged to "do a good job for the city," adding that he had not yet considered possible changes for the department.

Reaction generally was positive.

Rice's appointment must be approved by the City Council, whose majority bloc of 28 white aldermen and one Hispanic has opposed many of Washington's policies. If the council withholds its approval, the mayor could then name an acting police chief for the duration of his administration.

Rice, chief of patrol since 1979, sparked controversy as a district commander in 1974 when he established more racially mixed police teams by breaking up many longstanding two-man squad-car partnerships.

He joined the force in 1955, became a detective in 1961 and a captain in 1973. He headed the gang crimes unit before taking over the patrol division.

Carbondale man injured in wreck

A 24-year-old Carbondale man was injured Monday morning when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car near the overpass over U.S. Highway 51, police said.

Jim R. Horton, 24, was listed in satisfactory condition with a broken leg at Carbondale Memorial Hospital Tuesday night.

Ticketed for failure to yield the right of way was James J. Sullivan, 21. According to the Office of Admissions and Records, he is a junior in physical education at SIU-C.

Police said Horton was northbound in the 1,000 block of South Illinois Avenue when Sullivan pulled out in front of him from a parking lot.

Horton was unable to stop his motorcycle and hit Sullivan's car in the side.

Fire fighters were called to clean up gas which had leaked from one of the vehicle onto the street, police said.

And in the Middle East, the president said, the U.S. Marines in Lebanon, along with troops from other nations, "strengthen the resolve of the Lebanese government to assume the tough task of maintaining order."

Reagan, speaking of his "dual track" policy of building up strategic arms, including the new M-1 bomber and MX missile, while trying to negotiate reductions with the Soviet Union, said that "peace is an objective, not a policy. Those who fail to understand this do so at their peril."

British Prime Minister "Neville Chamberlain thought of peace as a vague policy in the 30s and the result brought us closer to World War II. Today's so-called 'peace movement' for all its modern hype and theatrics — makes the same old mistake," he said.

"They would wage peace by weakening the free. That just doesn't make sense," Reagan added. He did not criticize any group or individual by name.

Halloween proposals are falling into place

PROPOSALS FOR handling the first city-sanctioned Halloween party in Carbondale are falling into place. Among them are good ideas to make the celebration better for everyone — and some ideas which, at best, are less meritorious.

The Halloween Core Committee recommends that the city allow eight beer booths in designated locations during hours set aside for City Fair Days on Halloween weekend. Six of these booths would be located along Grand Avenue, and two along South Illinois Avenue.

This distribution would, if successful, entice revelers onto Grand Avenue, reducing congestion on the usually overcrowded Strip. This would make the party more comfortable and roomy.

BUT THE CORE Committee also suggests giving beer booth licenses to four local fraternal organizations — the Elks, the Eagles, the Moose and the American Legion — if they want them. Permits for the remaining four booths would be issued by lottery to Class C liquor license holders.

Granting licenses to specific fraternal organizations for the asking seems unfair. Though these groups sponsor commendable civic activities, not all their revenues are spent in such activities.

The city might do better to grant all beer booth permits by lottery. That way, beer booths could be distributed fairly without arbitrary consideration of applicants' civic merits.

CONCERN was expressed at the City Council meeting on Monday that limiting beer booth operation to Class C license holders is also unfair. This restriction may seem to exclude non-profit groups that might use booths for fund-raising.

But the city has to consider potential liability of beer booth operators in the event of alcohol-related incidents or accidents. Liquor license holders are aware of and generally insured for such contingencies.

That being the case, there is no reason to hold the number of beer booths to eight. A limit on outlets for beer will not limit alcohol consumption during the celebration, as council member Keith Tuxhorn pointed out. The uneven distribution plan could still be used while the city enjoys greater profit.

IT IS ENCOURAGING to see the City Council and community groups pursue a safe, enjoyable and equitable Halloween celebration. By using those terms to weigh each proposal for the party — especially proposals pertaining to the delicate issue of liquor distribution — they can virtually guarantee a memorable weekend.

Letters

Severe retardation should not be a barrier to active participation

This letter is written in response to Mark Stebnicki's opinions concerning Touch of Nature's programs. I was the camp director for Camp Olympia last summer and would like to respond to those parts of Mr. Stebnicki's letter that concerned Camp Olympia.

First of all, his negative comments concerning the 1983 Camp Olympia staff are extremely unfair. The staff this summer was an incredibly caring one who worked extremely hard to take care of the campers' personal care needs and to insure that the campers participated to the fullest of their abilities in the recreational activities. The majority of the staff had some previous experience working with special populations and many were college students majoring in therapeutic recreation, special education and other rehabilitation-oriented fields.

Most of our institutions and agencies that send developmentally disabled individuals to camp send consultants from their own staff to Camp Olympia as well. All of these people were very impressed with the professional manner in which our camp staff interacted with the campers, and the enthusiasm, dedication and patience that they brought to what can only be described as a demanding job.

Secondly, I must take issue with his comments that caving in the Lick Creek area is an inappropriate activity for severely-profoundly retarded campers. We had successfully taken other, more severely disabled groups on this same activity prior to the July 14 trip. It is the philosophy of Camp Olympia to provide all of our campers — including the severely-profoundly retarded individuals — with opportunities to participate in challenging activities in addition to traditional camp activities. While the activity may have to be adapted, a label of severe or profound retardation should not be interpreted as a barrier to participation in certain activities.

With patience and effort, all individuals, no matter how severely disabled, can achieve some degree of participation in challenging activities such as caving. This was shown time and time again at Camp Olympia.

The tragedy that occurred on July 14 was not a case of "sloppy" supervision done by an uncaring staff. It was simply a situation in which everything that could go wrong did go wrong. The situation was (and continues to be) a cause of great personal anguish for me and other staff as well. However, I feel that to indict an entire staff and program on the basis of one situation is quite unfair.

I strongly encourage Mr. Stebnicki and his neighbors to personally observe or become involved in Camp Olympia's program next summer to see for themselves how inaccurate their opinions are. — Ron Banks, Graduate Student, Special Education.

W. German anti-nuclear concern grows

Editor's Note: This is the second of two columns on possibilities for nuclear disarmament in Europe.

Nowhere in Europe is opposition to present U.S. nuclear weapon deployment proposals stronger than in West Germany. The country is already bracing itself for a "hot autumn" of violence and political demonstrations over planned U.S. deployment.

Many of the ingredients for an explosive national conflict already exist. Statements by anti-nuclear activists and interior ministry officials sometimes convey the image of a country where, in the words of one television commentator, rioters are "mixing Molotov cocktails as the forces of law and order practice swinging their truncheons."

Jo Leiner, chief spokesman for West Germany's anti-nuclear campaign committee, complained recently on U.S. television that "the government is trying to manipulate people's fear of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles into a false fear of the peace movement."

THE TERM "hot autumn" was first coined by Bonn's

Jack Prasai
Staff Writer

domestic intelligence agency chief, Herbert Hellenbroich, who forecast communist-inspired street violence. Right-wing Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann went further, predicting that demonstrators inspired by Moscow and financed by East Germany would clash with West German soldiers.

Those gloomy expectations were reinforced in June by an outbreak of rioting in the city of Krefeld, during a visit by Vice President George Bush. However, leaders of the West German anti-nuclear movement were quick to denounce the Krefeld riots and stressed their commitment to non-violence. But feelings among grassroots protesters

'If the movement confines itself to running peace picnics, we'll never stop the missiles.'

—Ute Becker, anti-nuclear activist were more ambivalent.

"AT LEAST those people in Krefeld showed they were there," Ute Becker, member of a Cologne women's anti-nuclear group, told the London Times.

"If the movement confines itself to running 'peace picnics,' we'll never stop the missiles."

The radical German Green Party and other anti-nuclear groups cite such people as Gandhi and Martin Luther King in calling for peaceful civil disobedience, such as sit-down protests in front of U.S. military facilities. The Greens argue that deployment would violate German constitutional rights of life and physical well-being. This, they believe, allows them to invoke Article 20 of the German constitution: "where no other help is possible, every German has a right to resist those who attempt to overthrow (constitutional) order."

THE GOVERNMENT dismisses this argument, stating that "non-violent resistance is violence." The contention is also rejected by almost all constitutional experts, but it illustrates divided feelings in Germany about nuclear deployment.

More than one million people will take to the streets this autumn to show their opposition to nuclear deployment. They will stage mass rallies, form human chains, hold sit-ins outside U.S. bases and participate in "die-ins" in city squares. And, as evidenced in Krefeld, hard-core militants may do more. The test of strength is likely to begin Aug. 31 when Green Party members and left-wing intellectuals plan to court arrest with a four-day blockade of the presumed Pershing-2 missile site.

THE OPPOSITION Social

Democrats and the trade unions are other factors. The Social Democrats will hold a special congress on the subject of deployment in early November. An overwhelming majority is known to back a "no deployment now" motion. This would effectively shelve any future support of NATO nuclear strategy.

One West German professor at SIU-C said opposition to nuclear deployment might be a vehicle for airing deeper frustrations in West German society.

"The missiles," he said, "are merely the focus of the frustrations of the younger generation, frightened by living in the center of the East-West conflict and yearning for a more comfortable national identity."

NOTING THAT the Germans are in the cockpit of Europe, the U.S. might start thinking twice before actually deploying missiles in Europe. Few bridges remain between opposing nuclear concerns in West Germany and U.S. deployment might only aggravate internal tensions there.

'Vacation' good for a few laughs

By Terry Levecke
Entertainment Editor

If you've ever endured a disastrous family vacation, you will be able to relate to National Lampoon's "Vacation."

Chevy Chase plays a suburban father, Clark Griswold, who plans, and destroys, the family vacation. Griswold, complete with horn-rimmed glasses and receding hairline, wants this to be a special vacation. He decides the family should drive... instead of fly... the 2,000 mile trek to Wally World, a pseudonym for Disneyland, to make it a "real" family vacation.

Chase departs from the character types he has played recently and gives a convincing performance as a successful father in his early 40s with humorous idiosyncrasies and a tendency to get a little crazy under the stress of trying to have a good time.

It's quite a different type of film for the National Lampoon clan too. The typically outlandish humor is the only trait that relates this movie to their previous releases.

"Vacation" has a good story line and is filled with funny situations, but the movie is not as hilarious as moviegoers

might expect.

The Griswold family resides in an upper-middle-class neighborhood somewhere in Chicago and is perfectly portrayed by the cast.

Beverly D'Angelo is excellent as Ellen, Cliff's wife, who is patient, attractive and, like many suburban housewives, close friends with her neighbor.

Anthony Michael Hall plays the young-teen son, Rusty, who, in his father's eyes, is growing up before his father can get to know him.

Dana Barron plays Rusty's sister, Audrey, who interacts genuinely with her brother. The pair create a comical brother-sister relationship. They, naturally, can out-manipulate their father on the home computer and through the course of the movie, witness some peculiar parental activity.

Their characters are refreshing because they don't play abnormally smart-alecky or "swinging" teenagers that so many movies have made this age group out to be.

Although Rusty claims that if he could go anywhere in the world for vacation, he'd like to go to Hawaii, Clark opts for Audrey's choice, Wally World. The vacation is doomed from the moment Clark Griswold goes to pick up the family car he has just purchased from the friendly neighborhood car dealer. He is forced to accept a car he didn't order because of circumstances beyond everyone's control.

Christie Brinkley is making her acting debut in this movie, and her performance should prevent her from getting any substantial roles in the future.

Her attraction to Clark is not clear and lacks motive. When she's showing herself off to Clark at a rest stop, she looks like she's posing for a photo session.

Why would a beautiful, obviously wealthy young blonde go after a middle-aged, not-very-attractive married man? The movie doesn't answer that question, but she is a good distraction from a wearing plot.

The satire of National Lampoon movies sometimes gets carried too far. This film is an example. It had some really funny spots and lines, but the plot pushes the outrageousness into cornball comedy. It's worth a few laughs, but don't expect too much.

Suburbs band to play in Carbondale club

By Lisa Nichols
Staff Writer

The Suburbs, recording artists whose "Music For Boys" single stayed on the Billboard charts for 16 weeks in 1982, will make their first area appearance Wednesday night at Mainstreet East.

The Suburbs' danceable New Wave-style music has been described in various music reviews as "magically decadent," "quirky," "compelling" and "intriguing."

One reviewer described their music as having "an appeal like alcohol" because "most of the world loves it, but no two people get off the same."

Most critics agree that the appeal of The Suburbs is due, at least in part, to the beat they instill in their music. The beat underlies the sharp guitar lines, strong bass and vocals which vary from crooked to crooned. It is this combination which first gained the critics' attention.

The band's members united in their hometown, Minneapolis, in 1977, with Beej Chaney and Bruce Allen on guitars and vocals, Chan Poling on piano and vocals, Michael Halliday on bass and Hugo Klaers on the drums. They were soon signed by the Minneapolis-based Twin Tone label.

The band's first album, "In Combo," was released in 1980 and won a spot on Village Voice critic's Robert Christgau's top 40 poll for the year. On England's New Music Express chart, "In Combo" climbed to number seven.

"Music For Boys," single from the band's 1982 double album titled "Crest In Heaven," also made waves on the new music scene. In 1982, The Suburbs released the 12-inch single "Waiting," which hit both the Billboard dance and Rockpool lists.

Their new LP, "Dream Hog," is their first release on the Mercury Polygram label. It includes two versions of "Waiting."

Tickets may be obtained in advance for $3.50 at either Mainstreet East or Plaza Records. Tickets purchased at the door will cost $4.50. Warming up for The Suburbs will be The Dead End Kids, a popular area band, who will kick things off at 9 p.m.

Water shortage hits Edwardsville

EDWARDSVILLE, (AP) — Car washes and laundromats were prevented from opening Tuesday in Edwardsville as city officials worked to replenish the town's water supply.

Lightning struck twice in Edwardsville on Monday, knocking out transformers that power the city's water pumps.

The pumps were working again early Tuesday, but city officials ordered residents to use water only for necessities until midnight Tuesday. By then, officials hope the supply will be replenished in three water tanks and 30 miles of water lines.

About 15,000 people are supplied with water from Edwardsville, including users at the city's Southern Illinois University campus, said Mayor Kenneth Evers.

It was the second time in two weeks that Edwardsville residents had been asked to cut back on water use. A pump broke last week, resulting in low water pressure.

Campus paper was a war casualty

Egyptian was resumed in '33

Published March 1, 1933

In a copy of the Egyptian published in March 1921, appears the following article:

The idea of a school paper as a regular periodical publication for the S.I.U. began to take shape in 1915 when Robert Brown, '13, a special student, actively promoted it.

In the fall of 1916, the Egyptian was launched as a monthly publication under the editorship of Claude Vick, '17, and the business management of Arlie Boswell, '17 and Fred Boswell, '17. The next year,

From Pages of The Past

Arthur Brown, '18, was elected editor-in-chief, and Raymond Colyer, '18, business manager.

A high standard of excellence was maintained by the Egyptian during the first two years of its life. Like most of the student interests it failed to survive the war's drain upon the school, and publication was suspended in the spring of 1918.

The newly created Student Council revived the idea for a school paper as one of its first acts. The Council provided for the raising of a subscription for a weekly publication, the choosing of a name, the election by popular vote of an editor-in-chief and the election by each class member of a board of directors.

The result of that action is the paper, the first issue of which is now offered to the student body.

Flying Salukis schedule tryouts

Tryouts for the Flying Salukis Team will be at 5 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Southern Illinois Airport in the flight training section. Applicants must either have a private pilot's license or be working to receive one. Fee for tryouts is $6. Airport planes may be used if applicants are checked before tryouts. Approximately seven pilots are needed to complete the team. More information is available from Tom Young at the Southern Illinois Airport at 529-2681.

Job scarcity affects work of placement employees

By Cathy Brown
Student Writer

So this is your last year and you're almost ready to venture out into the real world. Or, maybe you're a freshman wondering where all this hard work may lead you.

Possibly, it will lead you to the Career Planning and Placement Center. When the time comes to start looking for a job, the placement center may be able to help.

Richard Gray, center director, said about 2,000 students come to the center each year for help in finding a job. There about 7,000 to 8,000 persons listed in the center's active files.

The center works to place students by putting resumes and letters of recommendation into a central file and routing these to prospective employers when students request it.

Students are kept informed about job openings through weekly vacancy bulletins, which are sent to students who supply the center with stamped, self-addressed envelopes.

The center's services are available to all students, alumni and others. Students are charged a $15 fee and others pay $25. The center is in the B-Wing of Woody Hall.

News You Can Use

The center coordinates two education career days, one in September and another in April. On these days employers come to campus and the center sets up interviews between employers and students.

Gray said 58 organizations were represented at the September career day.

The center conducts workshops on resume writing and interview skills.

But, even with the center's help, jobs are not always easy to find. For the past three years, the number of interviews arranged by the center has declined, Gray said.

Students most likely to get jobs, Gray said, are those in engineering, computer science and accounting. The worst prospects are for those in liberal arts.

Morris Library offers access to varied resources, material

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

If books are all you can think of when you hear the word library, think again. Morris Library seems typical, but there is more to it than meets the eye.

The Student Media Design Lab and the Self-Instruction Center are examples of the kinds of services offered at the library. These are located in the basement. They are operated through Learning Resource Service.

The SMDL users can make transparencies, slides, audio tapes, laminations, posters, bulletin boards, opaque enlargements, drymounts, paper duplications and typed materials.

The design lab can be used to make visuals for reports, materials for student teaching, class presentations and personal portfolios.

Students can, quite literally, make their own materials. Roland Person, assistant undergraduate librarian, said.

An instructional designer will help meet users' needs and student workers provide technical assistance with equipment. Small quantities of materials such as overhead transparencies, thermal ditto masters and typing paper can be bought at the SMDL by purchasing a media card at the price of $1. Holes are punched in the card with each purchase.

In the SIC, users have access to material on a variety of subjects. Old exams, bones for physiology students to observe, as well as rocks for the geologists and seeds for the plant and soil scientists are examples of kinds of materials available, according to Jerry Hostetter, media assistant director at Learning Resources.

Students can work at their own pace and convenience. The multi-media materials are developed by the faculty and the instructional designers of Learning Resources Services.

The service can be used to prepare for exams, review previously covered material, explore areas of interest and, in some cases, hear a lecture that was missed.

Tapes, slides, films, microfiche, videotapes, reel-to-reel and cassette tape players are among the types of equipment available to the SIC user.

The Reserve Room contains materials placed on limited circulation at the request of faculty members so that many students can have access to them. Books, photocopies, government publications, theses, old exams are among the resources available. Circulation time for the materials varies.

News You Can Use

Library patrons who are visually impaired or disabled can find equipment and materials designed to meet their needs. Basic reference works, periodicals and books in Braille as well as phonographs, "talking book" records and a Perkins Braille Writer, which is used to make notes or record information, are available. Braille indicators have also been placed in the main elevators.

VisualTEK, a read-write system with microfiche attachment, is available to people with moderate to severe sight limitations. New to the library this year is a Kurz oil reading machine. This device reads newspapers, books, magazines and other kinds of printed material and converts the text to synthetic speech for listening. Materials are placed face down on the glass-top surface. As the machine's camera automatically scans the page, an electronic voice is heard reading the material. This machine was obtained through a grant from the Xerox Corp. and other support funding came from the University. Its cost was $29,000.

This equipment is located in the Special Services Room adjacent to the Undergraduate Library's reference desk on the first floor.

Some study tables on each floor have been raised several inches above regular height to accommodate wheelchairs. One study carrel on the third floor has been enlarged so that a blind student and a reader can work together without disturbing others around them.

Ramps at entrances have been added as well as doors that open at the touch of a button. Special keys for access to the downstairs area have been made available to library patrons using wheelchairs. These keys may be obtained through the Specialized Student Services. Efforts have been made to make the library physically barrier-free, according to Person.

The library staff will help specialized library users in using the card catalogs and getting materials off shelves. At one time, students could make appointments with librarians to discuss methods of research for papers. Now there is no specific program, according to Person, but students can just walk in and ask a librarian for assistance. Person said that this is the basic function of a reference librarian.

Books, articles, microforms and other materials not available in the SIUC libraries may be requested from others through the interlibrary loan program. The undergraduate library will search throughout the state, the graduate library, throughout the world for materials needed, according to Person.

Some materials such as genealogies, doctoral dissertations, rare books and bound or single issues of journals are not available, but patrons may receive microfilm, microfiche or photocopies of the desired material.

Interlibrary loan request forms may be obtained at the reference desk in any of Morris Library's four divisional libraries, the Undergraduate Library and the Law Library. Once the form is filled out as completely as possible, the patron gives it to the appropriate reference librarian.

Material is held at the reference desk where the request was turned in. Patrons are notified by telephone or mail when the material arrives. At least two to five weeks should be allowed for the processing of the request. Material to be returned should be returned to the reference desk where it was picked up.

Within the past year a Library Computer System was installed at Morris. It can be used to find where books are located, which ones can be checked out, and whether or not a book has been checked out. It also gives a partial list of the authors and titles that are included in the library's collection.

"This system does not replace the card catalog but provides a new type of approach to the collection," Darrell Jenkins, director of library services, said. The system presently contains over 850,000 books or monographs and over 150,000 serials.

This is also the system used to check out materials at the main circulation desk. Twenty-two other academic libraries throughout the state are included in the system, according to Jenkins.

Terminals for the computer system are available at the information desk on each floor and in the card catalog areas on the first floor. Directions for use can be found either on the terminal or by asking a librarian.

"The library is by nature a service organization," Person said. "We like it to be a place that doesn't put off students but encourages them. We're not the only place that has information, but we're certainly a major one."

Those students who want a closer look at the library can enroll in "The Library as an Information Source" GSD 199A, a one-hour, one-credit course that includes instruction on the use of catalogs, indexes and reference sources. Sections are limited to 20 students and are taught by librarians. Classes meet in the library so that students may use materials as they learn about them. According to Person, the classes are usually fully enrolled. There are 12 sections in the fall and eight in the spring.

The Special Collections section of the library contains rare books, historical manuscripts and the university archives. The manuscripts and archives are primarily used by faculty and graduate students in their research, according to David V. Koch, university archivist and curator of special collections.

Rare books are listed in the card catalog and are available for those with specific need for them. Research papers, theses and dissertations can also be found in Special Collections.

Materials must be used under the supervision of the librarians in this section, according to Koch. Nothing can be checked out.

The library contains 1.6 million volumes, 1.8 million microform units and a little less than 16,000 journal subscriptions. Jenkins described the library as awesome. "It might be a bit forbidding to the freshmen coming in," he said.

Formal rush concludes; 35 pledge sororities

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

Thirty-five women pledged sororities as a result of Panhellenic Council's pre-school formal rush, held last Wednesday through Sunday.

According to Sara Michaels, Panhellenic rush chairman, 14 women pledged Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, 10 pledged Sigma Kappa, six pledged Alpha Epsilon Phi, and four pledged Delta Zeta.

Michaels said sixty-six women went through rush this year, twice as many as last year. She attributed the improvement to the pre-school orientation program which allows a pre-school rush. "The sororities are able to interest women before classes start, and it is easier for them should they choose to move in to one of the houses," she said.

Michaels said 66 women went through rush this year, twice as many as last year. She attributed the improvement to the pre-school orientation program which allows a pre-school rush.

"The sororities are able to interest women before classes start, and it is easier for them should they choose to move in to one of the houses," she said.

Formal rush featured events at the Student Center, preference parties at the sorority houses, and a variety of choices and decisions to be made by the women interested in the sororities. Within the space of four days, the women meet the sororities, choose their favorites (for preference parties), and decided which one to pledge.

Connie Larimer, a freshman in business administration who pledged Sigma Kappa, said the Panhellenic rush counselors (who serve as sort of greek student life advisers) were very helpful. She said that all the sorority women she met throughout the week were very helpful in answering her questions, and that all the events were well planned.

Michaels "was ecstatic" about how well formal rush went.

High school campuses change

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

Enrollment on the Carbondale East and Central High School Campuses has been declining in recent years and is expected to continue downward, according to Reid Martin, Carbondale High School superintendent.

About 1,100 students attend East and Central High Schools. As the enrollment declines, Martin said, some reduction in teaching staff will take place. This year the number of teachers has been reduced by three.

The number and types of programs have not been significantly changed. However, Martin said the photography program, which was part of the vocational education program, has been eliminated due to lack of interest.

The vocational education program itself is in the process of being moved to Central Campus. The move is not expected to be completed until late winter, he said, because the new auto mechanics building will not be finished until then.

Students interested in vocational education may receive training in a variety of job skills ranging from commercial foods to architectural drafting, Martin said. Students from other area schools may also enroll in the vocational education classes, he said.

Computer classes are in no danger of being eliminated due to lack of interest. Rather, Martin said, computer classes have to be added to meet the students' demands.

Carbondale high school students may participate in a variety of sports. The football team, the boys basketball team and the volleyball team are reigning champions of the South Seven conference, Martin noted.

Last spring, Carbondale voters defeated a referendum to consolidate the Central and East campuses. To meet health and safety requirements established by the state, the Central Campus is under renovation.

Renovation began this summer. Efforts include work on roofs, plumbing and wiring, in addition to the installation of heat detectors in all classrooms and renovation of the commercial foods and special education classrooms.

The renovation cost almost $700,000 — excluding the cost of the new auto mechanics building — and is being financed by the sale of bonds, Martin said.

Martin said renovation work next year will cost about three times as much, about $2 million.

The Carbondale Elementary School District includes five schools. Elementary School Superintendent William Thomas said the district consists of two kindergarten through third grade schools, Lewis and Winkler; two fourth through sixth grade schools, Parrish and Thomas; and Lincoln Junior High School. About 1,400 children attend these schools.

Thomas, 48, is new to the Carbondale school system. He took over as elementary school superintendent July 1.

He said he plans to keep all programs intact and that the staff will be close to the same size as in the year before.

In March, the elementary school teaching staff was reduced by 12. Thomas said that six of those teachers have been rehired.

"We provide services for students with special needs," he said. "All of our programs are outstanding."

Thomas said he foresees no long term changes in the elementary education system in Carbondale. He has posted some goals for himself and the system, which include studying student behavior and discipline.

"I don't think we have discipline problems, but I want to find out how we can better work with students and their behavior," he said.

Teen survivalists charged with theft

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Five youths in a group calling itself the "Teenage Commando Squad" have been charged with stealing guns and ammunition to be used in case of a nuclear war or other disaster, authorities said.

Authorities recovered 29 handguns, high-powered rifles, shotguns and several thousand rounds of ammunition when they arrested the youths, aged 15 and 16, during the weekend, a police spokesman said. The group apparently was patterned after military survival squads, authorities said.

The puppet and the children in a photograph on page 37 of the Daily Egyptian on Tuesday were incorrectly identified as associated with Rainbow's End Preschool. The puppet, named Star Stuffy by its creators, Linda "Straz" Strazkowski and Joy Sherry-Boyd, was used in instruction at Rainbow's Children Early Education Center which is no longer in operation and which had no connection with the University's Rainbow's End Preschool. The children in the picture were Sharon Kirk and Jessi Dusterberg-Chaves.

Institute provides housing services

By Sandi Roberts
Student Writer

SIU-C now provides residential services for disabled clients through the Rehabilitation Institute's Evaluation and Development Center, located at 500-C Lewis Lane in Carbondale.

Dale Shelton, program manager at EDC, said the University began its residential program July 1. The program is funded by SIU-C and the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services and is designed to house EDC clients while they attend the rehabilitation program at the center.

"People should know that SIU-C is a direct participant in a community service program for vocationally handicapped adults and adults with disabilities," Shelton said. "It's something the University can take a great deal of pride in."

EDC is a non-profit organization that was established in 1974 to assess and train the vocationally disabled. It serves 35 counties in Southern Illinois and originally depended on its van service for clients who didn't have their own transportation or were unable to drive.

"Because of the size of our area," Shelton said, "there was no way our transportation system could pick up all of our clients. So to solve that problem, we have set up a residential program."

EDC's rehabilitation program is divided into three areas: Residential Services, Independent Living and Vocational Evaluation.

The Vocational Evaluation Program assesses physical performance, educational levels, aptitudes and abilities. It also helps clients find and develop jobs.

"We have a very sophisticated and well-equipped vocational aptitude program," Shelton said. "We identify the strengths and weaknesses of each of our clients and find their potential for training and competitive employment."

The Independent Living Program provides basic living skills assessment and training. For some clients, EDC has a driver education and evaluation program as well as access to housing and follow-along assistance. Follow-along assistance helps clients adjust to their new housing situation, finds an attendant if necessary and instructs the client in how to be an employer of an attendant.

"We're trying to help our clients to a point where they require only the most essential care," Shelton said. "We want them to be as independent as possible."

"About 50 percent of the people who attend the Independent Living program fully achieve the goals established for them," he said.

EDC has 12 full-time professional staff members and 16 graduate assistants in the rehabilitation program. About 250 clients participate in some or all parts of the program each year.

In addition to the rehabilitation program, Shelton said, EDC also has an adult education program available for those who have not received their high school diploma.

Forest Focus

Museum exhibit opens

By Bruce Kirkham
Staff Writer

In the period of time from the 1860's through the early 1900's, Southern Illinois was the center of the lumber industry in the growing United States. That period of history is the subject of a new exhibit on the Southern Illinois forest at the University Museum in the north end of Faner Hall.

The exhibit is the latest in a series of displays focusing on Southern Illinois history. "What we are doing is displaying the historical and economic industries of Southern Illinois," said Bonnie Krause, curator of history at the museum.

The exhibit's primary focus is on the area timber industry, with displays depicting the work being done in the area at that time, such as a miniature model of a logging "tent city."

Most of the loggers working the local timberland lived in the tent cities, usually with their families. When the work center shifted to a different location, the workers would pack and move to the next tent city.

The exhibit is entirely a product of the museum staff, who spent nearly a year researching the history of the Southern Illinois forest. That research involved locating and interviewing persons with first-hand knowledge of that period of history.

Once the historical research was completed, the primary task became the collection and design of the exhibit. Some of the tools and other items on display are owned by the museum, while others are on loan. All items which had to be manufactured were made at SIU-C.

With the booming westward expansion of the United States in the late 1800s, Southern Illinois became an important logistics center because of its centralized location.

At that time, Southern Illinois was the "railroad tie capital of the United States," according to Krause. Most of the original railroad tracks in the Western United States were laid on Southern Illinois oak trees.

Local lumber was also used to fuel many area manufacturers, who made products such as wagon wheels, baskets and packing crates.

The local timber industry began to fade after the early 1900s, mainly because the supply of easily accessible lumber began to dwindle. Also, by that time, the center of westward expansion was no longer dependent on Southern Illinois.

Since that time, much of the local forest has replenished itself. According to Krause, the Southern Illinois forest could easily handle a revival of the logging industry.

The forestry exhibit will be on display at the museum throughout the upcoming school year.

Art buys, gifts acquired for SIU galleries

Published Nov. 12, 1963

Paintings with an estimated value of $75,000 have been acquired during the past 20 years by SIU for its permanent galleries, according to Ben P. Watkins, acting curator.

A large group of paintings secured from the Federal Art Project in the early 1940s by Burnett Shryock, now dean of the School of Fine Arts, contains colors by Rufina Tamayo, Ben Shahn, George Ault, Julian Levi, several by Aaron Bohrod, former artist-in-residence at SIU, and a drawing by Ernest Fiene.

Paintings by Bohrod and by Raymond Breiner, also one-time artist-in-residence at Southern, were donated or were purchased by the University.

A gift to the University from the National Academy of Art and Letters was a painting by Jacob Lawrence, which was included in the Ford Foundation's "retrospective exhibition" circulated throughout the country during the past several years.

Also in the permanent collection are works by such artists as John Sloan, Alexander Brook, Milton Avery, Paul Burlin, Theo. Stamos, John Grillo, Carl Holty, Nell Blaine, James Lechay, Mario Nefzi, Gabor Peterdi, Warren Bra 4 of New York, formerly on the SIU faculty, and many others.

Benefactors of the University who have presented paintings to the permanent collection include Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Mitchell of Mount Vernon, who also furnished a large room in the Home Economics Building as a gallery; the Martin Oil Company, the Allen Tucker Foundation, Actress Helen Hayes, Warren Brandt and his wife Grace Borgenicht, and a number of other New York collectors and artists - Ben Weiss, Howard Lipman, Antonio Prado, Allen Emil, Sidney Gordin, Gordon Hammer and Michael Dann.

Involvement, understanding goals of Parents Association

Belinda Edmondson
Staff Writer

There is hardly a student alive who can forget those days of terror when mom and dad turned up at school with grim faces to hear about their little darling's behavior from that ominous society, the PTA.

SIU-C students may yet again be shivering in their sneakers
when the newly-formed Parents Association of SIU holds its first meeting this fall.

However, Tom Hadley, a graduate assistant in the Office of Student Development, which launched the Association, said that students here may actually welcome the new group.

"I think it will be very positive," said Hadley, "I think students will see that such an organization is an advantage."
SIU-C officials are hoping that greater parental understanding and involvement in students' academic and extracurricular routines will stimulate the students to new heights of scholarly prowess.
Hadley said that a successful Parents Association will have the desired effect.

"Research has shown that grade school and high school students perform better when their parents take an active interest in their schooling," he said, "and it makes sense that would hold true with college-level students as well."

Aside from being an inspiration to their offspring, parents will also have an opportunity to offer suggestions on how the University should be run.

"Parents often feel 'I'm just a number and a checkbook,'" said Hadley, "now they have an opportunity to see that the University needs their interest their support and their ideas."
"Constructive criticism is very important, and we're open to suggestions. Now parents can feel comfortable in making any comments about what we do."

However, there may be more tangible benefits for parents than the satisfaction from being more than just a checkbook:
members of the Association will receive special discounts on intercollegiate athletic events ("buy one ticket, your spouse gets in free"), special ticket rates to the SIU-C Celebrity Series and special rates at the Carbondale Holiday Inn.

There will also be special programs for Association members, one of these being a weekend program encouraging members to come to the University on other than special occasions. Hadley said that the organizers of the program would like to extend the program into Chicago and other areas where many parents live.

Hadley said that a Parents Association is not a new concept, and that the University of Illinois has had a successful

Parents Association for more than 60 years.

"With the launching of the Parents Association, there will be a structure and organization for parental participation.

"Many parents are not familiar with the University experience, and do not know what we are trying to do here," said Hadley. "There is often a lot of difficulty at home for the student, with the student having to make decisions on what major to choose, or whether to change the one he or she has,
and with parental pressure to choose a certain major or to stick with the present one."

Hadley said that better understanding on the part of the parents will generate a better appreciation of the growth of the student. The Association will expose parents to the system and goals of the University, in an effort to alleviate such problems.

So far, response to the Parents Association has been good, with an enrollment of 200 members in the first two weeks.
Hadley said.

The goal is to enroll 500 to 600
members by fall semester.
Members pay a $10 registration fee to cover the expense of news publications.

Program allows course credit for community volunteer work

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

The Credit for Structured Volunteer Service program aims to meet the needs of the community and provide students guided volunteer experiences while granting course credit.

Paul S. Denise, coordinator of the program, said it was set up last fall to follow the "University Year for Voluntary Action." It has had 44 students participate, 35 of them last spring, Denise said. Students are given up to six credit hours for their volunteer work with self-selected health, service, and community agencies.

The courses are cross-listed to Community Development and Social Work as CDSW 295 (for first time volunteers and underclassmen) and CDSW 495 (for experienced volunteers and graduate students).

Requirements for the course include finding a participating agency, keeping a log of learning experiences, and attending peer meetings with other CSVS volunteers.

"The students from the program did very well," according to Jan McGraw, the director of the Jackson County Community Health Center Network, a crisis intervention agency where several CSVS students volunteered. She said she appreciated the work the students did and said they are now prepared to handle "just about anything."

Kathy Ballard, a senior in Child and Family, said the training she received (at Network) was helpful and important. "It's a two way street, I put a lot in but also got a lot out of the program," she said.

Another student, Joseph Kirk Grissom, a sophomore in General Academic Programs, used the program to see if music education was what he really wanted to do. Grissom assisted the faculty at Murphysboro High School's choral department. He said that in teaching any experience is a plus, and the program allowed him that opportunity.

Tanya Brackett, a spring Administration of Justice graduate, was already volunteering at Network when she found out she could get course credit for her efforts. She enrolled in the program and received two credit hours for her five hours a week answering phones. Now a graduate student, Brackett said she expects her volunteering experience to help her to get a job.

Denise said the program is expected to grow as more students find out about it. He said also that the program will be offered during the summer semesters starting next year.

Ag School hires new equine scientist

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

Not only is Sheryl King, a doctoral student in physiology at the University of California, the first female to be hired by the School of Agriculture as a continuing faculty member, she is the new equine scientist there.

King will begin work in October on the horse program. "We're extremely pleased to have her coming on board. She's a young scientist with an extremely outstanding background," Anthony Young, chairman of animal industries said.

Just a year ago, the horse program was temporarily shut down. Young said the cutback was caused by the retirement of a faculty member who was in charge of the program, along with high operational costs.

Young said the department feels that horses are an important part of the curriculum. People in Southern Illinois want to see SIU-C have a really strong program, he said.

Since the shutdown, representatives of various aspects of the horse industry in Illinois formed a horse advisory council. The council helped establish a horse program that will generate receipts to help defray the cost of the program and serve to identify needs of the horse industry in the state in terms of research and educational needs, Young said.

The faculty position that was left open last year was reallocated by the department. King will be teaching physiology and equine science. She will also be researching equine reproduction.

Young said the problem with the horse program came with feeding and caring for the animals. "We could have all the horses we want, all we have to do is ask."

The program will be supported by the sale of offspring of high-quality horses which the department hopes to acquire for the program. Young said it will not put a drain on the budget, but will expand on a sound financial basis.

He said the horse industry deserves some kind of educational and service research in view of its size and the tremendous impact on Illinois economy.

Most people don't think of Illinois as a horse state but it is third in terms of the number of horses in the nation, according to Young. Bets on horse racing bring in $80 to 90 million in tax revenue.

Sophomore Per Wadmark is expected to nail down the Salukis' No. 1 singles slot again this year.

Tennis team young and contending

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

Last spring men's tennis coach Dick LeFevre said he was building a tennis team for the future that will make SIU-C a top contender in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The future is here and LeFevre is still very optimistic. While losing two players to graduation in John Greif and David Filer, LeFevre, entering his 27th year as coach, searched the world this summer and acquired Lars Nilsson from Malmö, Sweden. Roeland DeKort from Aruba, Netherlands, and Lino Cruz from Homewood Flossmore High School in Homewood.

"These are three talented tennis players," LeFevre said. "They should add some spark to our young team."

The tennis coach from the University of Florida called LeFevre over the summer telling him about DeKort. According to LeFevre, DeKort is a good player with plenty of tennis skills. There was no room for him on the Florida team so the coach recommended him to LeFevre.

Nilsson played tennis with Saluki Per Wadmark. No. 1 singles player in Sweden for 10 years. According to LeFevre, Wadmark was instrumental in bringing Nilsson to the Salukis. Nilsson brings the same skills Wadmark did his freshman year which made Wadmark the only freshman ever to step into the No. 1 singles position in SIU-C history.

Returning for the Salukis are Wadmark, Gabriel Coch, Rollie Oliquino, Scott Krueger, Paul Rasch and Chris Visconti.

Wadmark had a sensational freshman year playing No. 1 singles. He was ranked as high as 59th in the nation but a four-match losing streak lowered him to 95th at the season's end. According to LeFevre, Wadmark will still play No. 1 singles this fall.

Coch, a junior from Bogota, Columbia, played No. 4 singles last season and according to LeFevre did a fine job. Coch is suffering from damaged ligaments in his left wrist but should be healthy to play by mid-September.

After a slow start last spring, Oliquino, sophomore from Albay, Philippines, won his last nine matches and played a good No. 5 singles position. He will probably move up in the singles position.

Athens, Ga., contributed to the team's good finish last year in the Missouri Valley Conference. According to LeFevre, "They will contribute even more this fall."

Rasch and Visconti played No. 3 doubles last spring and, according to LeFevre, they played well together. They may get moved up to No. 2. LeFevre is debating the idea of playing Wadmark and Nilsson together at No. 1 doubles. He wants them to practice together and then he will see how things work out.

Of the ten players on the tennis team, two are juniors, four are sophomores and the remainder are freshmen.

LeFevre's goals for the tennis team are straight forward. He wants to beat Wichita State and win the MVC. Wichita State is ranked 14th in the nation.

"That will be our toughest job," LeFevre said. "We came close to them last year, but this year, I think we're going to do it."

The Saluki's first match will be at the Illinois Intercollegiate Invitational at Notre Dame from Sept. 30 to Oct. 2.

"I'll see where our team stands after that Invitational," LeFevre said.

Intramural schedule full

By Daryl Van Schouwen
Staff Writer

Intramural Sports has a full calendar of fall activities on tap for individual and team play, so get your sweat socks and sneakers ready, and keep your student ID card handy.

Despite a decline in enrollment this fall at SIU-C, intramural sports Coordinator Joyce Craven expects about 8,000 participants in fall and spring semester intramurals.

Because of a rule change implemented in the summer, participants should be prepared to present their student IDs at intramural events. This policy was adopted to prevent teams from using ineligible players, or "ringers."

"We used the policy this summer with success and we think it will work in the fall," Craven said. "To benefit the students who are legitimate we're going to have to be hard-nosed."

Another change in policy will allow teams to add players to rosters at the site of a game, Craven said. It will no longer be necessary to fill out a player-addition form at the Recreation Center office.

Intramural action gets under way Sept. 6 with 12-inch slow-pitch softball. There are men's, women's, and co-recreational leagues with three divisions in each. The A division is for teams with above average skill, the B division for intermediate to beginning levels of skill, and the C division for casual but challenging play. Teams that win three of the five scheduled games in the A and B divisions will advance to post-season tournament play, but no playoffs will be scheduled for C division.

Craven expects about 200 softball teams to participate. A captain's meeting will be August 29, and entries will close that day for softball and for the men's and women's tennis tournament which also gets under way Sept. 6.

Also on the calendar is a disc golf tournament Sept. 9, singles tournaments in badminton and golf, and the start of floor hockey action Sept. 12. Craven said she expects a "considerably large" turnout in floor hockey. All of these events have men's and women's divisions.

Tryouts set for baseball and volleyball

Anyone interested in trying out for the Saluki baseball team should report to the Arena, Section O, at 3:15 Wednesday.

Anyone with volleyball background or experience who is interested in trying out for the SIU-C intercollegiate team is invited to contact Coach Debbie Hunter at 536-5566 or stop by the team's practice, which is 5:15 to 5:45, Monday through Friday, at Davies gym.

Saluki golfer claims fifth berth to play in U.S. Amateur tourney

By Sherry Chisenhall
Sports Editor

Saluki golfer John Schaefer, a senior from Carlinville, qualified last week for the U.S. Amateur Tournament, which will boast the top 282 amateur golfers in the country.

Schaefer shot rounds of 71 and 70 in the qualifying tournament at Normandie Golf Course in St. Louis to claim the fifth and final berth to the U.S. Amateur from the Normandie tournament, a feat that caught even SIU-C golf coach Mary Beth McGirr by surprise.

"Qualifying for the U.S. Amateur is a tremendous honor for John," she said. "He's worked so hard on his golf game and it's exciting to see his efforts pay off in such a positive way. It will be a great experience for him to play with the best amateurs in the country."

"Based on his tournament scores this summer, it sounds like John is at the top of his game and I expect a banner senior year for him. He deserves a lot of credit."

Last spring Schaefer finished fourth in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in Tulsa, Okla., behind rounds of 78, 71, 76 and 71, and was also named to the All-Conference team. Last weekend he also claimed his club championship in Carlinville by 10 shots, carding rounds of 65 and 66.

After his peak performance at the conference tourney, though, Schaefer sprained his ankle and was unable to play at the season-ending tournament the Drake Relays Invitational Golf Tournament.

Schaefer said Monday that he had been off the golf course for about seven weeks because of his ankle and was unsure how he would fare at the qualifying tournament.

"I was out for a while, then I was playing well in July, so I was interested to see how I'd do," he said. "Needless to say I was very pleased. I had been playing well and felt I could do well. It was very satisfying for me to qualify."

Schaefer played the Normandie course in a tournament last spring, but not in the 100-degree weather of the qualifying tournament. He said he is looking forward to playing the course at the U.S. Amateur, North Shore Country Club, which has sported the U.S. Open.

Schaefer said he has no expectations of the Amateur.

"It's a big thrill for me just to play there," he said. "The first thing I'd like to do is make the cut to the final 64, to begin match play. It's a really nice course and I'm going to try to just have a good time and enjoy the atmosphere. I hope to do well because it would be a big confidence-booster for me for my fall season (at SIU-C), which starts in a few weeks."

The Amateur runs Aug. 30-31 in Chicago at North Shore Country Club.

Southern Illinois has fun runs, half-marathons and triathlons

By Joe Paschen
Staff Writer

If you enjoy long distance road races, Southern Illinois will offer numerous organized runs this fall. If you like to watch scenic road races, there are many to attend this season. Or if you would like to learn how to prepare for long distance runs, you are attending the right university.

There are two seasons for long distance races in Southern Illinois. The mild spring temperatures bring out a number of events. The summer heat cools the road races until late August when the second season brings out dozens of sponsors and organized runs from two-mile fun runs to half-marathons to triathlons.

The first of many area road races was in Murphysboro Friday evening. St. Andrews Church sponsored its second annual 5,000-meter run to start off the annual parish weekend festival.

This year's overall winner was the same as last year's. Saluki cross country veteran Tom Breen improved on his time by ten seconds this year, winning in 15:13. Not far behind was Saluki cross country freshman and Class AA cross country champion Brent McClain, who finished in 15:29. McClain, from Benton, finished fourth overall in last year's race. Another SIU-C cross country runner, freshman Kent Leek of DuQuoin, finished 9th overall.

The overall women's winner at St. Andrews was Linda Rushing of Carbondale, in a time of 18:35. She was followed by last year's runner up, Jean Tokheim of St. Louis in 18:58.

One of the individual organizers of the St. Andrews race is Ken Carr, director of communications at the SIU-C Health Service. Carr is one of those unique cases that, thanks to running, has a new lease on life.

The 35-year-old father of two weighed over 220 pounds when he first arrived to SIU-C in January of 1981.

"I went to Boston for meetings a couple years ago and met with some friends from the Wellness Center who were running in the Boston Marathon," Carr said. "So I went out to watch the marathon and afterward I knew then I needed to run to lose weight."

Carr is far below 200 pounds now and even his wife and three-year-old son run around the track with him in the evenings. He says he plans to push his 16-month-old daughter in her carriage at an upcoming 5K. His idea to organize the St. Andrews run has made it popular in joining with the festival that weekend, and because the St. Andrews race is one of the few run in the evening. Most races are run in the early morning weekend hours.

There are two area runs on tap this weekend.

The Third Annual Applefest Warm-Up 5K is set to begin Saturday at 7:30 a.m. in Murphysboro. Interested runners can contact Bob Strueter at the City National Bank in Murphysboro (684-3191) for further information.

In Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sunday, the Third Annual Cape Runner event takes place. There will be a half-marathon (13.1 miles), a 5,000-meter race, and a 7UP run (.7 miles). Races begin at 8 a.m. at Broadway and Fountain streets. Registration can be picked up at area running stores or entries accepted up to 7 a.m. on race day.

SIU-C has a Roadrunners

Club for interested students and faculty members. Tom Strachan is president of the club this year and is in the process of organizing meetings and runs for the fall. Interested runners can contact the Recreation Center for information on the Roadrunners Club.

For those who would like to learn how to prepare for long distance running, there are the Sunset Joggers. This group meets beginning Sept. 12 from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Monday and Wednesday, in the golf room of the Recreation Center. They will discuss running techniques, equipment and injury prevention. Wear running gear to these meetings. There will be running involved.

For the truly dedicated endurance athlete there are periodical triathlon competitions. The Recreation Center and Touch of Nature will co-sponsor a mini-triathlon Sept. 10 at the Touch of Nature south of Carbondale. There will be a one kilometer swim, followed by a 13K bicycle ride, closing with a 6.5K run. For further information on this event contact Rick Green at the Recreation Center.

There is also a periodical runners newsletter in Southern Illinois titled the Little Egypt Roadrunners Newsletter. SIU-C physical education professor Ron Knowlton has distributed this publication for three years and said the next issue will probably come out toward the end of the year so as to review fall results and rankings of area races and runners. Knowlton also acts as faculty advisor for the SIU-C Roadrunners Club.

Numerous area road races are planned for the fall season in Southern Illinois and there will be future notices on upcoming races and stories of race results.

Scientists debate pest control options

By Robert Lee Zimmer
Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, (AP) — Nematodes, which wiggle into the bodies of corn rootworms and eat their way out, may offer a safe and effective way to kill corn's major pest, some scientists say.

Others are skeptical, but all are anxious to find biological controls that will provide farmers an alternative to toxic chemicals. U.S. corn growers spend $450 million a year sowing 43 million pounds of pesticides to kill rootworms.

University tests this summer have not been encouraging, but they may help researchers determine under what conditions this particular type of nematode — a tiny worm — will do the job.

"This isn't the golden goose yet, but I think it can be," said John Evans, president of the Colorado Insectary at Durango. "Maybe the breakthrough is just happening."

Evans firm is one of a growing number distributing natural enemies of farm pests: nematodes, parasites, and organisms that "eat bad bugs."

A 1982 Nebraska test — challenged by some entomologists — suggested that one type of nematodes killed about 35 percent of corn rootworms, while a popular chemical killed only 25 percent. "What we did was show that there is a possibility that should be investigated further," said George Poinar, an insect pathologist at the University of California. "I'm worried about our ecology. Farmers need to get away from all these chemicals."

Poinar worked on the Nebraska test with Evans, who hopes to sell nematodes to treat 100,000 acres of corn in 1984.

Evans said the creatures are applied to the soil in water as corn is planted. When rootworm larvae arrive, about 10,000 nematodes get inside each one. They eat, lay eggs, and hatch 250,000 hungry new nematodes. "They just blow the thing apart, get out and wait for the next larvae," said Evans. "The rootworms have to go through a blanket of nematodes to get to the corn."

But there are skeptics. Marlin Bergman of Purdue University, Jon Tollefson of Iowa State University and Eli Levine of the University of Illinois said their field tests of nematodes were negative.

"The nematodes essentially did not control the rootworms," said Levine, though he conceded he had problems with his test plot. "A lot of things work well in the lab but you put them in the field and they fall apart."

The results from Nebraska and from another field test at Iowa State were not available.

"I'm excited about the concept," said Tollefson, who expects to repeat the tests for two more years. "We haven't given up."

At the U.S. Department of Agriculture laboratory in Brookings, S.D., researcher Jerry Sutter said he and colleagues are trying to find out what will make the nematode treatment effective. They are looking for the ideal volume, time and method for applying nematodes, and the best soil conditions.

"I look upon the nematode as having good potential for insect control," said Sutter.

Evans said the nematode treatment might cost $12 to $15 an acre, compared with $9 to $10 for chemicals. However, he said nematodes will not hurt humans or the environment, and should not fail to kill rootworms, as chemicals sometimes do.

Young men must report addresses

Published Oct. 5, 1983

The director of Selective Service for Illinois yesterday warned young men to report their current addresses to avoid immediate induction as delinquents.

John H. Hammack, state director, said that until recently, boards in Illinois were not classifying men under 21½ years old. But the boards are now processing younger men and will soon have all men over 16½ years old classified.

Hammack said that if a board cannot locate a man to have him submit a classification questionnaire, it declares him a delinquent and orders him for immediate induction ahead of his regular term.

The director said that President Kennedy's exempting married men from the draft has lowered the age groups.

Attention: Student Workers

WHY A CREDIT UNION?

Your paycheck is not your only benefit as a student employee of SIU. You are eligible for membership in SIU Employees Credit Union.

A credit union is a cooperative financial organization. Members pool their savings and borrow from that reserve. The credit union is actually owned by the members. It makes no difference whether you have $25 or $25,000; you are part owner — a shareholder.

Because a credit union is member-owned, it traditionally pays a higher interest rate on savings. In addition, SIU Employees Credit Union offers an attractive package of financial services custom tailored to meet members' needs.

COSTS NOTHING TO JOIN

Membership in the credit union costs you nothing now or later. Simply maintain $25 in a Share Savings Account. If you are a part-owner, this represents one share in the credit union. If you should ever decide to terminate your membership, your $25 will be refunded in full. In the meantime, it will earn higher than bank interest.

ONCE A MEMBER ALWAYS A MEMBER

SIU Employees Credit Union subscribes to the philosophy "Once a member, always a member." You will retain your credit union membership for life, even if you are no longer employed by SIU. Membership is a lifelong benefit available to you now.

CUSTOM CHEQUEING

No-cost checking is a thing of the past at banks and savings & loans in the area. Not at the credit union. The credit union offers a truly cost-free checking account. It requires no minimum balance, no monthly service charge, and no charge for clearing checks.

Secondly, student members with an average daily balance of only $750 will earn 3 1/4% annual interest from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Interest is paid monthly.

Many student members report moving money from other savings accounts to their interest-bearing checking account to earn interest on all of their money — including that which will be spent on living expenses.

The credit union's checking account earns daily interest on all of the money filtered through the account. Even if the funds stay in the account for two days, two months, or two years.

The credit union has one of the lowest minimum balance requirements in the area and pays without question the highest rate of interest.

Carbondale's future to depend on more than just agriculture

Published March 4, 1935

A student ponders, "I wonder if Carbondale has always been just like it is now? It hasn't changed any, since I've been around here."

But nevertheless it has changed since the early days of S.I.T.C. In 1878, when the school was just four years old, Carbondale had a population of 2,800. The first steam mills had been installed for the grinding of corn and sawing of lumber.

These were all in the east part of the township. As a matter of fact, all of the business places were on the east side of town. There were no brick buildings; all were frame except several homes. These were brick, but almost without exception such homes were situated a mile or so from town on prosperous farms.

Such homes were known as country seats, and indicated the origin of wealth of the community. Carbondale was interested solely in agriculture, and the Jackson County History boasts that land was worth as much as $25 an acre.

However, indications of a great future along other lines were already present. The History further states, "This is a great shipping point. The Illinois Central, the G. T. & C., and the C. & S. railroads all pass through Carbondale. The Illinois Central alone is forced to employ three men to transact its business at this point."

The predecessor of Stan Layman's Ford was a dilapidated buggy and equally dilapidated horse apparently intent on mounting the front steps of the institution. The scenery across the street from the one building that constituted the seat of learning, consisted largely of garden plots planted in pole beans to a remarkable extent with the poles very much in evidence.

Some students might be interested in knowing that the southwest portion of the town was just a great grove of trees in those days. Barbecues and political meetings were held there. In that grove General John A. Logan delivered some of his most stirring addresses.

There was an Indian trail across the east part of the township, leading to an Indian settlement on the Big Muddy River. Legend has it that the path many S.I.T.C. students travel in going to town from the south side of Lincoln School Grove to Washington Avenue, is part of that trail.

There was one advantage back in those days: there were good sidewalks. At least they were good most of the time. These walks were made of boards, and every Halloween the youth of the neighborhood carefully took them up and distributed the timber over the community.

In one thing the city has not changed. Even then it was known as the "Holy City," and was proud of it.

One of the first ordinances was this: "The selling or giving away of intoxicating malt or vinous, mixed or fermented liquor in the city or one mile outside, and next beyond the city limits, is hereby prohibited."

The Jackson County History adds, "There have been many attempts on the part of the disaffected, to change this. It has been several times submitted to a vote of the people, and invariably the good sense of the citizens has enabled us to keep saloons from the city. But once, in the history of the city, has there been any permanent place of amusement or gaming in the city, when there were two billiard saloons but these were discontinued when the time of their license expired."

New students will be 'tagged' by social security numbers

Published Oct. 24, 1983

In a theoretical four years, all undergraduate students at SIU will be "tagged" by their social security numbers.

All students applying for admission to SIU next summer will be asked to obtain social security numbers. These will be used for their record numbers while they are at SIU, according to Dean Isbell, coordinator of systems and procedures.

But the "phasing in" of the new system will have no effect on students presently assigned numbers on the old system, Isbell's office reported. The present ID cards are designed to work with both the current system, and the new social security system.

The effective numerical limitation of the present system is the number 99,999, the office explained. When this was reached, the old system required starting anew with a letter in front of four digits, such as B 3051.

The new ID cards, issued for the first time this fall, accommodate both the present student record numbering system, and the new social security system. Starting winter quarter, the ID card will also serve as a library card; the system change will have no effect on usage of the ID card as a library card, Isbell's office explained.

The social security system was started this fall at University High School for grades seven through 12.

High school guidance directors and principals have been informed of the prospective change, according to Leslie J. Chamberlin, director of admissions. They are being asked to advise seniors planning to enroll at SIU next summer to obtain their social security numbers now.

Students may be qualified for public aid

News You Can Use

By John Stewart
Student Writer

About 17,000 students at SIU-C receive some type of financial aid, but how many receive public aid?

There is no way to tell, according to Karl Piepenburg, a public information officer with the Illinois Department of Public Aid. But, he says, some students are eligible to receive public aid.

In most instances, students are only eligible for food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children and usually must be independent of their parents to qualify for the aid, Piepenburg said.

To qualify for food stamps, students must not have over $1,500 in assets, must be full-time students and either be working 20 hours a week or on federal work study.

Individual students may receive a maximum of $75 a month in food stamps. Students who make up to $507 a month may be eligible to receive some aid.

Students with children may qualify for AFDC. According to Piepenburg, a family of four with an income of up to $890 a month may still receive some assistance. A family with that income in Carbondale would be eligible for $348 a month in aid if all other qualifications were met.

Food stamps and AFDC are federal programs implemented through the Illinois Department of Public Aid. Students who believe they may be eligible for aid may call the Jackson County Office in Murphysboro for more information. Aid is awarded on a semester basis.

Dislocated worker program to start at Logan College

John A. Logan College has been awarded a state grant to establish a Dislocated Worker Assistance Center to aid unemployed workers.

The center will provide comprehensive employment and training services, including career, financial and personal counseling services, job search assistance and job skill training.

To be eligible for the free services, an individual must have been terminated or laid off from his job with little chance of returning. Individuals who are receiving unemployment benefits and those whose benefits have expired are eligible.

The center will also assist people experiencing long-term unemployment with limited opportunities for employment in their job field.

The grant, awarded by the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, will establish similar employment assistance centers at three other Southern Illinois community colleges.

Honors Program settling in at new headquarters house

Cathy Brown
Student Writer

Things are looking better than ever for academically talented students at SIU-C. They now have their own house for studying or relaxing, a house which may soon be equipped with such learning tools as a word processor and a computer terminal.

These special benefits are for the approximately 360 honors students at SIU-C. Honors students are especially motivated students who repeatedly make high grades.

University Honors moved last fall from its cramped quarters in Woody Hall to a large two-story house at 803 S. Oakland St. George Brown, director of the program, said he hopes to soon acquire a word processor, a computer terminal and electric typewriters to be used by honors students.

The honors program also offers less tangible opportunities to eligible students. Honors students may take advanced sections of General Studies courses, take departmental honors courses and work on undergraduate projects and theses.

For instance, students may take such classes as "Creative Communication" or "Biomedical Revolution and Ethics" for General Studies credit. They may also receive some financial backing for special projects which they can use for credit toward graduation.

One group of students who were in an "American Theater" class took a trip partially paid by University Honors to New York for a week, to study the theater there. When they returned, they wrote and performed their own plays.

To be admitted into the program, a beginning freshman must have an ACT score of 26 and be in the top 10 percent of his class. A continuing student must have completed at least 12 hours of work and have a grade point average of 3.25 to be admitted.

Before graduating, a student must complete 15 hours of honors work, including one major project or paper. However, two-year transfer students and students in the School of Technical Careers need complete only eight hours of honors credit.

The advantage of honors courses is that the classes are smaller and students are encouraged to probe deeper, Brown said. He said the typical honors student enjoys school and would study in depth on his own. The program tries to accommodate those students.

"The university has a commitment to work with its better students," Brown said. There are about 20 scholarships available, Brown said, that University Honors provides for some of its students.

In addition to working with honors students, University Honors also coordinates the campuswide Honors Day, and handles the Harry Truman Scholarship and the Lincoln Academy Award. They also have information on scholarships and awards for other students.

The honors students have their own non-academic organization, the Council of University Scholars, which raises money for picnics and various other activities.

Southern eyes educational TV channel

From Pages of The Past

Published April 18, 1952

A new medium of education may soon be utilized here at Southern. The Federal Communications Commission announced April 14 that Carbondale had been allotted one of the new seven educational television channels in Illinois. Southern is making plans for the operation of channel 61, an ultra high-frequency, as a new means of propagating education.

Buren Robbins, director of radio here, expressed the opinion that if funds and equipment are available and technical difficulties are overcome the station might possibly be on the air two years from now.

According to authorities concerned with the project, the station would televise programs of a wide and varied educational nature. Programs would be prepared to fit the needs of groups that are predominant in the area. Children's programs, housewife's programs, working-men's programs, and other interests would be presented daily.

Other channels were allotted to Champaign-Urbana for the University of Illinois, DeKalb for Northern Illinois State Teachers College, Moline-Rock Island-Davenport; Chicago, Springfield; and Rockford.

Campus organizations match student interests to activities

By Johanna Ingvarsdottir
Student Writer

Attending classes and doing homework are just a part of getting a college education. Outside of class, group activities are also part of the learning process, according to Nancy Hunter Harris, director of student development.

Hunter said both are "equally important in getting a good education as well as enjoying college life."

To be able to apply the in-class learning experience to real life situations is valuable, Hunter said.

"All through life, whether you are in college or out of college, you will get involved in a group and it is a good experience to get to know what it is to be a part of a group. It gives you valuable leadership skills," Hunter said.

In addition, groups can provide "some good, plain, old-fashioned fun," Hunter said, "which is important for everybody as well as learning about different cultures and one, all broadening our horizons, because we are not always going to be working around people who are exactly like us."

Service-related organizations

News You Can Use

are being formed more now than before, which may have something to do with reductions in funding for some of those agencies, Hunter said. Student groups have been formed to support some local agencies. For example, a group has been formed to support Synergy, Synergy w.s partially funded through the health service fee, but because of rising costs for health service, a student board recommended not funding Synergy, Hunter said.

Each year, 20 to 30 new groups ask for recognition by the Office of Student Development. At the same time, about the same number of groups deactivate or decide they don't want to be in existence any longer.

This depends on what types of things are of interest to students at the moment and especially on what is happening in the society from year to year, Hunter said.

"For example," she said, "Back in the late 1960s and early 1970s, we had a lot of groups that you might describe as being political activist groups particularly related to the Vietnam War, men being drafted and that kind of thing."

Coordinating councils seem to have the largest number of students, but the average number of members for many groups is about 30, Hunter said.

The procedure for forming a student group requires that it have at least 10 members. The Office of Student Development assists groups in getting organized and registered.

Where's the action? Ask Leisure Service

By Maria Caldwell
Student Writer

Are you new in the area and don't know where to go? Have you lived in the area for some time, but never taken the time to see what Southern Illinois has to offer? Now is as good a time as any to take advantage of the Leisure Exploration Service to see what opportunities are available to you.

LES provides information about leisure opportunities, recreational resources and an awareness of leisure education, said Barbara Gossett, a 1982-83 graduate assistant for LES.

LES has compiled a guide which serves as an easy reference to the LES resource filing system. "We provide information so that people can have alternatives to make an educated decision on where they want to go," Gossett said.

The Shawnee Forest and areas within a 60-mile radius of Carbondale are the most frequented places, Gossett said. LES has information about tourist attractions, including state parks and national forests in all states and a growing international file.

Outdoor activity information is by far the most highly requested information, but LES also provides information and dates for festivals and historical events throughout the year, Gossett said.

"LES offers leisure education workshops that take time management, assertiveness, decision-making and value clarification and relate them to leisure," Gossett said. In effect, these workshops "personalize the concept of leisure," she said.

Ron Strieker, graduate assistant for LES, will be in charge of the workshops, while Chris Dillard, also graduate assistant for LES, is in charge of demonstrations for various activities to give people a "better opportunity to know what their interests are," Gossett said.

"LES is a student service which is run by students," Gossett said, explaining that "it is a low cost service because students are allowed academic credit in return for gaining communication skills; learning to prepare and facilitating workshops through teamwork."

As part of the Outreach Program, LES will also visit with residence hall groups, classes, clubs and other interested groups to share information about what is available, Gossett said.

LES sponsors an activity-trip board which is designed to help individuals get together and plan their own recreational activities and trips, Gossett said.

LES is open from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Interested persons may contact LES at 536-5531, ext. 25.

Delyte Morris elected president

Published Sept. 16, 1948

Dr. Delyte W. Morris arrived last Friday to assume his duties as the newly elected president of Southern, succeeding Dr. Chester F. Lay who is leaving to serve as a professor at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

Dr. Morris comes to Southern from Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio where he has been professor of speech and director of the speech and hearing clinic for the past two years. Although the new president has been on duty less than a week, he has met with every major group connected with the University, as well as a number of civic organizations. His most immediate attention was given to the University's long-term planning committee in a discussion of Southern's long-range expansion program and its drastic building needs.

By no means a stranger to Illinois, Dr. Morris was born in Xenia and graduated from high school at Flora. He received his bachelor's degree from Park College in Parkville, Mo., his master's from University of Maine, and doctor of philosophy from the University of Iowa, majoring in speech and psychology. He is married and the father of two sons, 7 and 10 years old. While in college, Dr. Morris was a member of the track team and of Pi Kappa Delta, undergraduate honor society. He is also a member of Phi Delta Kappa, honor education society, is former president of the Indiana Teachers of Speech Association, and is now president of the Central States Association of Teachers of Speech.

In a press conference Dr. Morris stated, "Coming in as a newcomer, I find that Southern has two cardinal needs; the need for extensive expansion of the physical plant, and the need for personnel expansion. A factual study of these and other needs will be made as soon as possible."

Dr. Morris went on to say, "The most notable aspects of the university are its superior teaching staff and its large student body. We have here the core of a great university as a strong, southern section of Illinois. Southern, I feel, has one of the most challenging opportunities afforded by any higher educational institution in the country, and I assure the people of Illinois that I shall do everything in my power to help the school realize its fullest potentialities."

Dr. Morris is to leave for Chicago and then to Columbus, where he will settle his affairs before returning to Southern.

Language Exchange to match students

A Language Exchange Program matching American foreign language students and international students is being offered by International Services.

The program, in cooperation with the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and the Center for English as a Second Language, will bring English-speaking students who wish to improve their fluency in a second language together with foreign students learning English.

Students will be paired and expected to meet at least one hour per week during the semester to converse on a topic of their choice, said Thomas Saville, international opportunities adviser.

The program began last fall with 34 people, Saville said.

Ten languages are offered in the program — although Spanish, Mandarin Chinese and Japanese are most likely to provide matches for American students, since most foreign students at SIU-C speak one of those languages.

Saville said students should have at least one year of study in the language they wish to learn. Interested people can contact either Burghilde Gruber or Thomas Saville at International Services.

Education is importing for peaceful reform

Editorial
Published May 10, 1940

To become convinced that education is facing a grave responsibility, one needs only to follow the proceedings of youth conferences as they meet ever more frequently throughout the nation.

Thinking young people are dissatisfied, and they are expressing their dissatisfaction in an increasingly vehement voice.

They are disappointed at not being able to find jobs. They resent being without adequate food, adequate clothes, and adequate medical care. They are bitter because they know America is not a poor nation, but one great enough and rich enough to provide a decent standard of living for everyone, although only a few enjoy her wealth.

It is significant to note that in the face of rising tuition fees elsewhere, these same fees at S.I.N.U. have remained unchanged, and are now less than at any other college in the state of Illinois.

We have a report showing the relative amounts of registration fees at the five state teachers' colleges of this state. These figures include the book rental fee in all cases, except for Macomb, where books are purchased privately:

Carbondale	$52.50
Charleston	58.50
Normal	65.00
Macomb	66.00
DeKalb	68.25

Why a boost in fees has been necessary at other colleges is not of great concern to us. The significant aspect to us should be that we pay the same amount as formerly in spite of the fact that the pressure which has caused the increase elsewhere exists here to an even greater degree.

Apparently there has been a tendency in other colleges to place the burden of increased expenses, at least to some extent, on the shoulders of the students. We hope this is not a manifestation of the general opinion which exists in many backward areas that those people should be educated who can afford to pay for it.

The administration at Southern, if we may draw conclusions, will have no part of the theory that education is a good thing for folks - if they can afford it. Looking at Southern Illinois through the eyes of a realist, the administration not only sees, but also acts upon, the obvious necessity for practical, inexpensive education of a high quality in this area.

Economic prostration in Southern Illinois makes it imperative that Southern remain a low cost college; the present administration has frequently emphasized its awareness of that fact. We who benefit or lose by the policy of the college may well feel grateful when we realize that the administration has gone out of its way to familiarize itself with conditions and needs in the area served by the college.

It is the youth of our land who are leading the anti-war movement. They want jobs, not guns. They want peace and an opportunity to earn their daily bread.

What is the responsibility of education in the face of this group of dissatisfied youth?

From Pages of The Past

According to some economists and sociologists, it is from this class of thinking college youth, not from the hungry laboring masses, that our Reds and Revolutionaries originate. People who are hungry are usually too busy worrying about where the next meal will come from to become anarchists.

What can education do? The answer is not obvious. But perhaps a realization of the fact that to a large extent social reforms spring from educational groups ought always to influence our efforts to improve educational methods.
